A Ghostly Race.

I was the proud possessor of a first-class deeple-baser and I could not win a race with tim.' I was engaged to one of the prottlest girls in the world and could not marry her! That was my position a intic more than three Mabel Vayne and I were cousins and had seen growing more and more in love with one another ever since we were children and played at being sweethearts. But the stern ates, as represented by Mr. Vayne and his wife, Mabel's stepmother, were opposed to sor union on the grounds that I had not an Meured income, in the first place, and that I offe and owned race borses, in the second. aw out of the dilemma was to pull of a big soap and then propiline her parents by sell-ng off the horses. Now came in the difficulty of The Knight, my crack stooplechaser. He at The knight, my crack streplechaser. He had taught Mabel, so now, for her strength, she could ride as well as I could-

CONCERNS OF THE DISTRICT

Sergt. Daley the Subject of a Petition from Pourth Precinct Citizens.

Permission Given the Knox Express to Build a Brick Structure, with Stables on Any Floor-Provision Made for a Pythian Reviewing Stand on Fifteenth Street.

A numerously signed petition from citizens residing or doing business in the Fourth precinct was filed yesterday with the Commisioners, asking for the retention of Sergt. John C. Daiey in that precinct. The petitioners base their request upon the grounds that they want Sergt. Daley "for the protection of our homes against the law-breakers, who, previous to his appointment there, have disgraced the community and its government. Sergt. Daley's work in the Fourth precinct has greatly increased the peace and quiet of the neighborhood, and pleases us who are most deeply interested in its welfare." The paper has about 200 signatures at-Additor Petty filed a report with the Com-missioners yesterday in the matter of claim of George H. Engeman, president of the Ivy City Jockey Clab, for refund of a Heense fee deposited Desember 7, 1833. Mr. Petty says: "In the case in question it appears that Mr. Engeman took out license for horse rac-ing for the term of four weeks, paying there-for the sum of $100. His attorney says he ran but one race, and then determined not to race more. In so for as he Government was conr as the Government was con weeks. The importance was con-reduced, by was at liberty to race for four weeks. The importance subsequently refused, and as Mr. Engenm. s licen a was not refused, but he having received, i, simply failed to use it for the full period for a hi a it failed to use it for the full period to: this it had been granted, it seems clear that he is not entitled to the relief he seeks."

In the matter of salary claimed by James H. Clements, late of the police force, the auditor also flied a report. Clements tendered his resignation as a police officer August 1, which was not accepted, and subsequently on the light of August he was dismissed. The salary question was for the amount accraining in the interim between the date of resignation and date of dismissal. The auditor holds that Clements is entitled to pay for all the time up to the date of dismissal.

PUTHIAN REVIEWING STAND. The Commissioners yesterday directed that ermission be granted to Samuel Ross, chairnan of committee on privileges for Enights of Pythias encampment, to place a reviewing tand on the sidewalk of Fifteenth street to within three feet of the curb, extending from the south line of Treasury building to the line of street on south side of the Treasury

A building permit was yesterday issued to the George W. Knox Express for the erection of one three-story brick building, to be used or express business and stable, on lots 22 and 6, corner of Second and B streets northwest, the building is to be of fire-proof construc-ion, except the roof. The regulation adopted by the Commissioners to prohibit the erection buildings with provision for stabling horses in any floor above the first does not go into peraiton until the 27th instant, and by makag application prior to that date the Knox company secured all their former privileges. Building Inspector Entwistertipulated, how-wer, that the building should be of strictly ire-proof construction. Estimated cost of the atructure is $20,000. Permits were also suced to Marry & Gooden for a three street the structure is $20,000. Permits were also issued to Mary A. Gordon, for a three-story brack building at No. 3309 of street northwest, $4,500; D. C. Beeves, one two-story brick stable in rear of No. 1955 Linden street, Le Froit Park, $450. Permits for repairs were issued to Mrs. J. Ferry, for repair to dwelling at No. 1181 Teach street northwest, $800; Eev. Paul Griffith, to build shed in rear of No. 1525 L. street northwest, $100; W. M. Galf & Co., for improvements to warehouse corner Indiana avenue and First street northwest, $4,000; and John Cook, repair of dwelling at No. 814 Teach street northyest, $4,000; and John Cook, repair of dwelling at No. 814 Teach street northyest, $4,000; and John Cook, repair of dwelling at No. 814 Teach street northyest, $4,000. ing at No. Six Teath street, repair of agenting at No. Six Teath street northyees, $600.

Health Officer Woodward states his belief that there is a defective water pipe in premiers No. 191 E street southeast, which permits water to flow into No. 502 First street

Chief Parris, of the Pire Department, has recommended Private L. A. Wenver, of En-gine Company No. 1, for promotion to the po-sition of assistant foreman, subject to the usual probation, vice S. E. Masten, deceased, John B. Daiah will be awarded the contract for supplying forage for the current year, under his bid submitted the 22nd instant. John Jones has been appointed an additional private on the police force, to serve without compensation, and is assigned to duty on James Creek, between N and O streets

Superintendent Davis has reported to the Commissioners that the condition of Fourth street southeast, in the vicinity of No. 722, has prevented the sweepers from giving it the attention it deserves. He says it is in no con-dition to be swept by machinery, its surface dition to be swept by machinery, its surface being rough, uneven, and full of holes, and urges the reparing of the street. The health office has recommended to the commissioners that, "in view of the approaching encampment of the Enights of Pythias and the probable presence of 20,000 to 40,000 visitors in this city," the National

Twilight.
I had bought the two at the same time, and, although the horse was vastly the superior animal, the mare had a great turn of speed and made a capital bunter for Mabel,

One day (it was the autumn of the year) my flancee and I determined that the time had arrived for the great plunge. The Knight was very fit and well and capitally handicapped in a race at Kemptou. To make sure he was in his best form we determined that I should ride him over peat morning, and I should ride him over peat morning, and "You will come in to breakfast, won't you?"

The next morning we were upon the Wold, donkey beat him. Whip and spurs had no effect.

Twice had I virtually won a good race on him, and each time when he had the fleid settled he had let a hard-ridden but beaten horse pass him and go on and win. There was but one stimulant strong enough to rouse the brute, and that was jealousy of his half-sister, Twilight.

The next morning we were upon the Wold, the next morning we were upon the wold, and horse were upon the Wold, the seen borse was out. We started by mutual consent, and directly I felt that The Knight had got well into his strike I sent him to the brute, and that was jealousy of his half-sister, Twilight.

We came at length to Mabel's garden, now shorn of its summer glories, but the chrysan-themums and a few autumn flowers still made a brave show.

Sauntering on we at length came to so old summer-house built at the very end of the grounds. The seat was rotten and had parily given way, but this was rather an advantage, as it compelled us to sit very close together. Never shall I forget that morning. How happliy the time passed talking of our future. Weeks passed away in apathy and then a gips to deaden the pain. At first it was but a gips to cheer, but shortly it grew on me till one day I awoke to the fact that all the money I had won at Kempton and much more besides had vanished, and that if I did not rouse myself I should soon have nothing not rouse myself I should soon have nothing

FOR SALE-SUBURBAN. COLUMBIA PARK,

I made the running, and, as before, at the last hurdle only The Clown and I were in it. This time the former made no mistake. I was close alongside the rails and he on my whip hand. With a bitter feeling of disappointment I saw him gradually outstride my horse. The brute would not try. In vain I spurred. Suddenly I felt The Knight's stride lengthen out. What miracle had aroused him from his sluggishness.

Something compelled me to glance on my left hand. As I am a living man, there, mounted on Twilight, was my own Mabel. Madel Vayne. She looked just as she used to, ber skirt fluttering in the wind, as the mare, every muscle at full stratch, raced alongside on the floor, with the broken remains of the seat scattered around ms. "Dend—Nof Baityon have been asless everys long. The innehecon-bell has rung twice. You get my galiant, I must say. Oh, do get up, Charlie, or I shall never cause laughing, when the old seat fell and you rolled of its was funny."

"Just Riss me, Mabel, to make sure I am awake in reality," I said, scrambling to my feet.

Shadid. One good thing happened through my dream. I entered The Knight at a country meeting where there were few carriages, pat a lad up on Twilight, and told him to race allongside on the floor, with the broken remains of the seat scattered around ms.

"Dend—Nof Baityon have been asles pever so long. The innehecon-bell has rung twice. You get my content of the seat scattered around ms.
